OIL KING'S WIFE DIES AS HE RACES TO HER BEDSIDE

Street school, now known as the East Fourteenth Street school. And she renewed her friendship with young Rockefeller.

In 1862 Miss Spelman described by her superiors as a splendid disciplinarian and a perfect teacher, became assistant principal of the school. Rockefeller, absorbed in business, took the books of his firm to her on an evening and together they would go over his affairs. Both of them were interested together in church work, too; she as a Congregationalist, he as a Baptist; and neither ever attended a dance or the theater.

Young Rockefeller prospered beyond his fondest hopes. As soon as he felt that he could ask her to become his wife he did so. They were married on September 8, 1864, the eve of her 25th birthday, and started to keep house in a little two-story brick residence on one of Cleveland's side streets. Upon her marriage, she became a Baptist and to her religion and her home she devoted her entire time.

"To be a good wife and mother is the highest and hardest privilege of a woman," was one of the sayings accredited to her by the little circle of friends she knew at this time. The borders of her world were her home. Her whole life was wrapped up in her husband and children. She avoided all social functions and joined no clubs.

When Mr. Rockefeller's wealth was mentioned in seven figures they left their first home for a residence remarkable only for its unpretentiousness on Euclid avenue, Cleveland's "mile of millions." Here Mrs. Rockefeller reared her four children; a fifth died in infancy.

The training given the Rockefeller children by their mother is declared to have been almost Spartan. Although the Rockefeller wealth increased in leaps and bounds there was only one carriage and a horse cared for by a man, who acted as both coachman and hostler. There were used mostly Sundays on the trip to church. Mrs. Rockefeller employed two maids but still insisted on doing much of the work herself. She also supervised every detail of the care and training of her children, particularly seeking to instill in their minds the lesson of thrift. It is related that on one occasion she averaged up the gas bills for a year and promised as spending money to her eldest daughter any sum she might save each month by watching that no lights were left burning needlessly.

A relative told of her suffering under a particularly bitter newspaper attack in Cleveland against her husband. At her insistence, the guards around the Forest Hill estate were doubled. Although Mr. Rockefeller received scores of letters threatening his life, and personal friends and relatives pleaded with him not to expose himself, he insisted on making his usual Sunday trip by automobile to the Euclid Avenue Baptist church.

When Mrs. Rockefeller heard of his determination she insisted on accompanying him, although poor health had kept her confined to the house for some time.

"If anything happens to you," she is quoted as saying, "I want it to happen to me too."

Of her children, three are living. She was the mother of four daughters and one son, the last named, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., being the youngest. Her eldest daughter Bessie, who married Prof. Charles A. Strong, died in France in 1906 at the age of 40. The second daughter, Alice, died in infancy.

The surviving children are Alta, wife of E. Parmelee Prentiss; Edith, who married Harold Fowler McCormick; and John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

Police & Hospital Reports

The case of Thomas Blackwell, chauffeur, charged with disobeying the orders of a traffic officer, was before Police Judge Monsarrat briefly this morning. The court denied a motion by Attorney Frank Thompson, representing Blackwell, to dismiss the case and granted Thompson's request for a week's continuance. The case will come up again for hearing on March 19.

The United States steel corporation suspended the dividend on the common stock.

A one-hundred-thousand barrel production was reported in the oil fields of Lawrence county, Ill.

SCULLY DEFENSE DENIES ROBBERY, BLAMES CHINESE

Officer Harry Lake of the city and county attorney's office, who testified concerning the map of the building as he had drawn it; Henry Lewis, one of the defendants, and Mrs. McGrath, wife of Jack McGrath.

Scully's story, as outlined by his lawyer yesterday, is that he was acting only as a sort of messenger or "go between" for Chan Chun. He had known the Chinese a long time and on February 3, at the Oriental's urgent request, had gone to the Matson pier and obtained a package to deliver to Chan Chun.

Chan Chun, said Andrews, had told Scully that if he would go to a certain place on the Matson dock and get a certain package and bring it to Chan Chun the latter would pay him $100 in cash. The Chinese had expressed a fear of attempting to get it himself, and from the nature of the offer Scully guessed the package contained contraband, or unstamped opium. Scully at that time was hard pressed for ready money, and took the opportunity to make a little "easy coin."

After obtaining the package, however, Scully conceived the idea that he was endangering himself by having contraband in his possession. He didn't care to keep it on his hands until he could find Chan Chun again, and decided that to be safe he should hide it and later take the Chinaman to the cache. He thought the home of Jack McGrath would be a good place to take it and acted on the impulse. Arriving at the house in Kalia he found no one at home, so he hid the package on the premises and returned to town.

He had a trust with the Oriental on River street the evening of February 3, when he was to deliver the mysterious package. He kept the trust, told Chan Chun he had the stuff hidden and asked the latter to go with him. Chan insisted on hunting up a couple of friends to go along so, finally, in Lewis' car Scully journeyed out to the McGrath home with Chan Chun, Ah Tim and Apau.

In the parlor of the home, with Mrs. McGrath sitting in another room, with McGrath and Lewis both absent, Scully brought in the bag and opened it. Chan examined some of the tins. Scully discovered it was opium, just as he suspected all the time and, moreover, that it was unstamped. Chan entered a mild protest when he apparently discovered this latter fact, and declared that because the opium was not stamped he would not pay Scully his $100.

Scully did not get his pay, but Chan gave him some of the Oriental's tins and Scully and the Oriental trio departed. Scully waved goodbye to them and remained to chat with Mrs. McGrath, awaiting the return of her husband.

Lewis, the chauffeur, on the witness stand proclaimed his ignorance of the party's dealings. He said he had remained in or near his car throughout the time the men were at the McGrath home. He had the impression, however, that when the party reentered his car and ordered him to drive downtown were four or five men, and this hazy impression was strengthened when they got out in front of the custom house. In fact, he was convinced, he said, there were white men in the machine with the Chinese on the return trip. He believed this because he received orders from someone in the tonneau who spoke good English.

He was so thoroughly convinced that he carried two "extra fares" back to town that he told Scully so when he met the latter a day or two later and informed Scully that he would have to charge him a dollar for them.

Where these two extra fares came from, how they happened to get into the machine or who they were remains a dark, impenetrable mystery.

On cross examination Lewis admitted that after his return to his auto stand that evening, shortly after the trip to Kalia, he placed $80 in gold in the care of a Japanese helper at the stand, for safe keeping. He explained this was money he had collected that day and the day previous; that he intended sleeping in his car that night and did not want the money on his person while he was asleep, being afraid of robbers.

Mrs. McGrath, on the stand today, testified that she was home the evening of February 3, and that shortly before 10 o'clock Scully came to the back door, inquired if McGrath was home and, receiving a negative answer, requested the use of the parlor for a few minutes.

Mrs. McGrath retired to her bedroom, where she read until the party left. She could hear a murmur of voices in the parlor; had seen three Chinese follow Scully into the room, but heard no entry of "Hail hi!" and had no gunner concealed in her own room. The Chinese had testified that the gunmen came upon them from the same room Mrs. McGrath says she occupied.

B. & M. RAILROAD SETTLES WITH ENGINEERS

(By Latest Mail)
EOSTON, Mass.—Differences between the Boston & Maine Railroad and its engineers, which developed recently over interpretation of the agreement signed eight months ago, have been adjusted. A general committee representing the engineers which made representations to the management during the past week, has dispersed, while a general committee representing the firemen convened to take up similar grievances.

LOCAL AND GENERAL

Oceanic Lodge No. 371, T. and A. M., special, second degree, tonight at 7:30 o'clock.

The Chinese Students' Alliance has issued invitations for "St. Louis night" to be given at St. Louis college hall on tomorrow evening at 8.

Examination questions for the mid-term examinations in the public schools of the Territory are being mailed out to the schools by the department of public instruction. The questions are for tests for the four higher grades of the elementary schools.

In pursuance of the decree of the supreme court which reversed his earlier decision Circuit Judge Ashford yesterday granted a divorce to Mrs. Christina Macedo from Manuel Macedo, Jr. He had previously granted the divorce to the husband on the latter's cross bill.

The Y. W. C. A. homestead will be the scene of a lawn party 8 o'clock tonight and informal talks and other features are scheduled for the program. Provision has been made to accommodate the guests in the Castle Memorial Kindergarten building in the event that it rains. The general public has been invited.

Duke Kahanamoku invented his own swimming stroke and should be given entire credit for it, said Representative Rawlins, former coach of the champion, at the Y. M. C. A. last night. His famous stroke differs from the crawl stroke used by Caville brothers of Australia in its peculiar propeller-like motion of the feet.

Views of several speakers showed that the sentiment of the board was against the primary election holiday bill, but the board announced, through speakers, that it had no desire to go on record as opposing the measure because of the fact that another branch of the chamber already has adopted resolutions favoring the holiday.

At a meeting in the Chamber of Commerce the Board of Retail Trades unanimously adopted a resolution requesting the board's members to purchase marine insurance policies from local agents yesterday. This action was taken following an appeal submitted to the organization by the Insurance Club of Hawaii, a recently organized body.

No mention was made in the resolution of boycotting the insurance department of the American-Hawaiian Steamship company, although the complaint of the insurance club was that this department had been getting a large part of the local business. It is said the department has no local agent but does business direct through the home office.

One-cent postage came up again for discussion and was referred to a committee to investigate further and report back to the board at a later meeting. A communication from the retail furniture dealers of Tennessee asked the local merchants to indorse a national bill to tax mail order firms one per cent for interstate business. It was pointed out that approximately 20 per cent of the American business has been transacted through these mail order houses. The board indorsed the bill.

FULL PROGRAM FOR Y. M. C. A. ATHLETES FOR THE WEEK END

The Y. M. C. A. has a full athletic program for tonight and tomorrow evening. At 7 o'clock tonight the captains of the track teams in the intermediate department are holding a meeting to decide the details of their track season. At 8 o'clock the Athletics and Washingtons go against each other in their first indoor baseball match of the season.

Tomorrow evening the intermediates open their track season. Two events are to be pulled off. First comes the 100-yard dash. It may be of interest to know that the indoor North American record for this event is 11.1. Following the dash the runners will go at the standing broad jump. These two events are good openers for the extensive track season which has been planned for this department. The present season promises to be a banner one at the association for track.

FAIRCHILD HOPES PHILIPPINE BILL STILL BE PASSED

posed by the president, as it was by members of both houses.

Bill Would Have Helped Philippines. "The passage of the bill would have materially improved commercial as well as political conditions in the island. It would immediately have given the Philippine people many issues to had only one—that of independence, either at once or at some time in the near future."

Asked about the trade commission and what was expected of it, Mr. Fairchild said that all of the commissioners but one had been confirmed by the senate before he left Washington. Under a resolution introduced by Representative Mann, the commission will report to Congress instead of to the president as was the case with the Taft tariff commission. According to President Wilson's speech at Indianapolis, Mr. Fairchild said, the trade commission would consider tariff matters and thus avoid the necessity of a tariff commission.

With regard to how mainland business is adjusting itself to European war conditions, he said that while some were making money others had been ruined by the situation. Some brokers who had European connections and were enjoying incomes of $40,000 and $50,000 before the war now had to stint themselves severely, and one result was that a great deal of fine residence and apartment house property could today be bought for the amount of their mortgages. Mr. Fairchild told a story he heard in the East, of a broker who stood at a corner in the financial district fervently praying, with upcast eyes, that he be sent to Hades, and on being asked what he meant replied, "Well, dat's vere all ta business is gone."

Washington For Peace. Washington, Mr. Fairchild said, was strongly for peace—anything but that the manhood of the country should have to shoulder guns. Public men would prefer that the United States should assume the European claims against Mexico for adjustment later, rather than have trouble with that country start at the present juncture—"but of course there is a limit to that sort of thing," Mr. Fairchild observed.

With regard to his firm's affairs in the Philippines, Mr. Fairchild spoke cheerfully. "San Carlos is in very satisfactory condition, not having been affected by the locusts last season as were Mindanao and other regions," he said. "The prospects for the sale of its sugar are very favorable. Last year the average price obtained was something over 5 1/2 cents."

Questions about the recent disturbance, he said, that Filipino political leaders really had nothing to do with it. "A lot of misguided dupes" made the trouble, according to him, and its author was a fellow named Ricardo, who, having considerable dealings with ignorant countrymen attached them to him by conferring high-sounding military titles on them.

Mr. Fairchild left his wife and family in New York, they having got out of Europe in October. He has a son in Cornell University, where President Schurmann, being one of those impressed with the nation's unpreparedness for defense, is now giving special attention to military training for the students.

The Pittsburg Steel Co. plants at Charleroi and Monessen, Pa., resumed operations on full time.

The clubhouse of the New Jersey Yacht Club on Newark Bay at Bayonne was destroyed by fire.
